

INTRODUCING SOME MALAYALAM WORDS

Words are combination of alphabets arranged in a sequential pattern that can give meaning to the whole sequence. Every single syllable has a rhythm, whereas a word completes this rhythm into musical notes and when used in a sentence it gets converted into a melodious song or anything beyond mention. In that sense we can say that each language is a concert that offers various possibilities for communication. It acts as a medium that can connect people who are near and far. Language of course has a strong capacity to convey the right message and sometimes in a twisted manner as well. Mother tongue is a convenient medium everyone has got to mingle with the people. Moreover we also get a chance to learn new languages under several situations, like when we move to another country for study, job or as settlers. There we get to know a different culture, language, people and it's is this diverse nature of our country that stick people together.

Language is a closest companion that can lead our way, helps us to acquaint with new companions and above all places us in the highest pedestal of life at different phases. Spoken words are air puffed balloons loosened out and burst out its energy producing a blast thereby revealing its utmost capability to speak. To learn a new language is indeed a good chance to get familiarize with new words, meanings, ideas and insights. Diversity therefore broadens the scope for bonding, sharing and learning something new always. Language thus acts a carrier of message, medium of communication, supplier of opportunities, facilitator and above all a bridge that connects us with people of different countries with diverse language, ethnicity and culture.
