The poetry of earth is never dead.
It still lies in those cheerful winds.

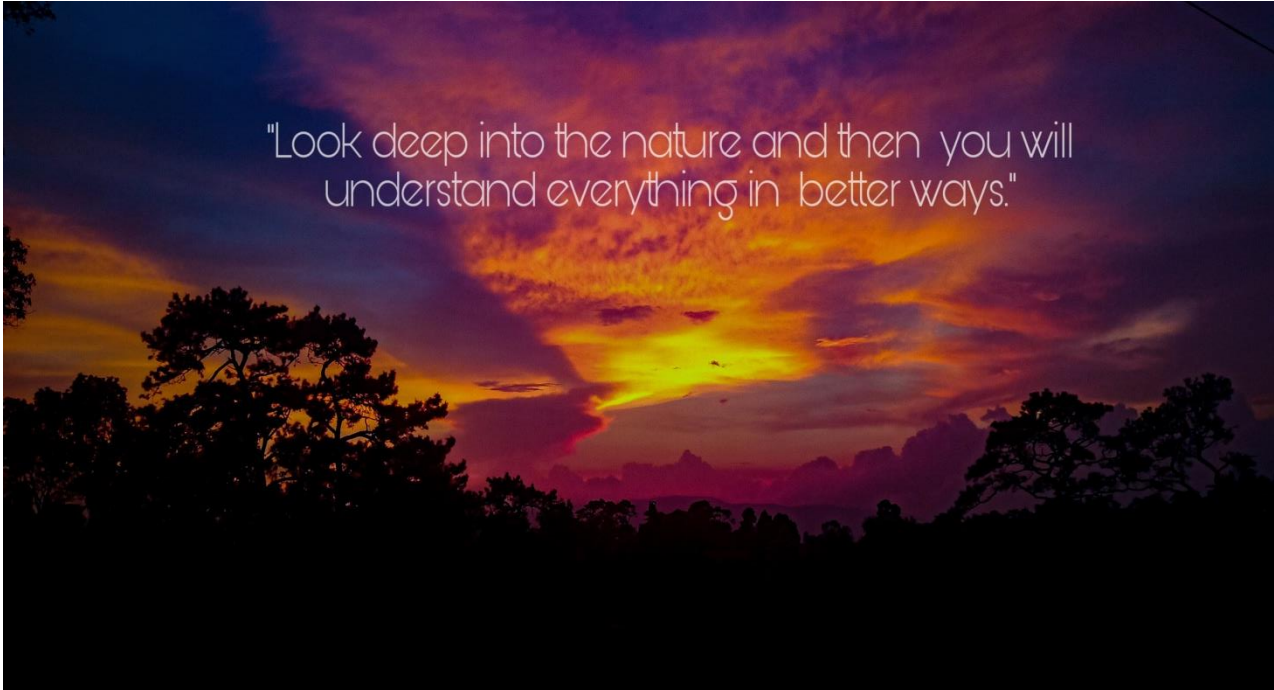

In those bright sunlight, in
blooming flowers, in morning dews,
in humming bees and every corner
of the earth and its beings.

It lies in you.

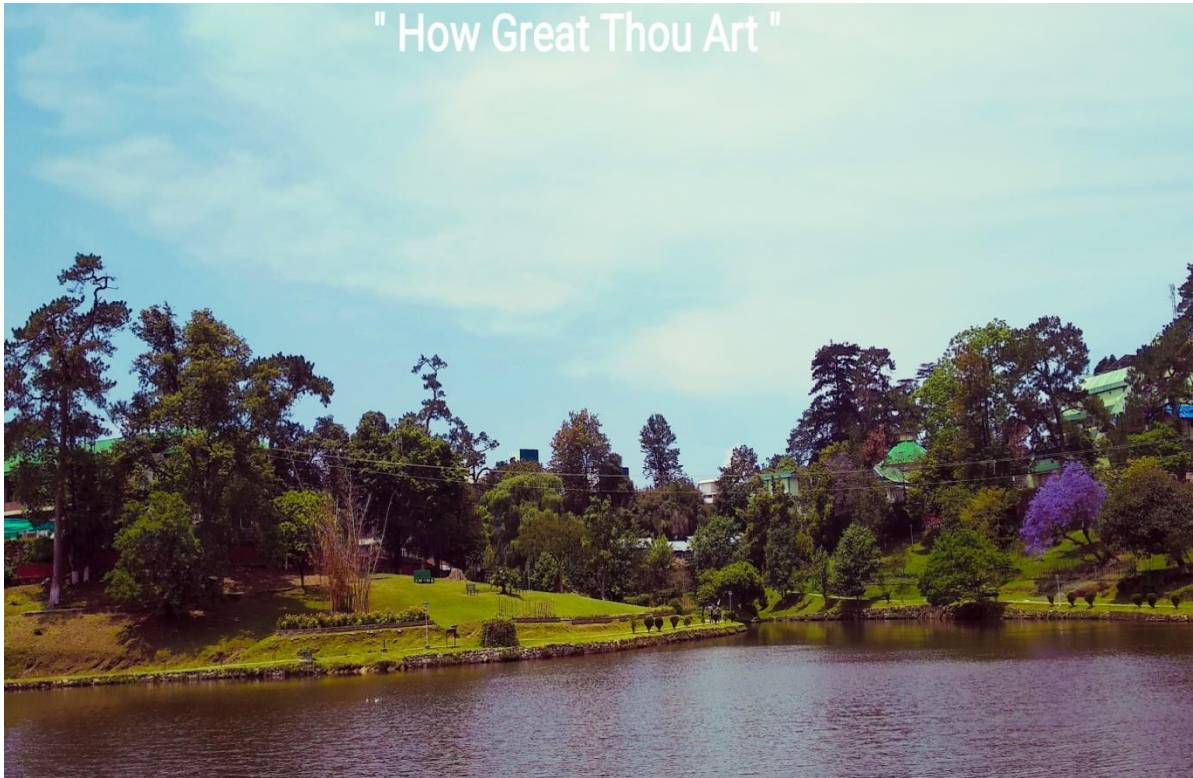

It lies in me.

Look outside see the dawn.
Deep into the green far away.
Observe the flowers in the breeze.
Dancing and fluttering, things won't always be this way.
Whispers of the gentle winds plead me,
In a hushed voice "set it free".
But my cold hearted soul failed to respond.
Can earth be earth when all it's trees are gone?
And tainted life no longer meets the dawn.
