Report:

Indo-China border conflict escalation from time to time is an unfortunate event for all. But a more focused, analytical look into the matter springs up many facets which are not easily apparent to the simple lay man minds. The Indo-China conflict is far bigger than the geographical border conflict. It has very deep, long term impact on the world trade especially the Indian trade and South Asian trade. The implications of China's encroachment of territories and major infrastructural investments in foreign territories run deeper and are totally linked with China's ambitions of reviving the ancient silk route and becoming a leader in world trade thereby, eventually becoming a formidable economic power. Dr Bharat being a much sought after expert in the field had a very thorough, in-depth study on the subject which he shared in his deliberation.

100 participants attended the webinar and the rest watched it in live streaming on Face book. E-Certificates were distributed to all attendees.
