The session was taken by Mrs. Sneha Sharma (Centre- Coordinator) CRC, CNLU, Patna. During the first part of her session, she emphasized that the aim of gender sensitization is to make people aware of the power relations between men and women in society and to understand the importance of affording women and men equally opportunities and treatment.
- In another part of her session she emphasized on the fact that Children in every country, regardless of family background, have lost many of their rights. The right to education and information, the right to play and the right to privacy have all been substantially restricted, at very short notice. The right to education and the right to play are in danger. The session was highly interactive and we received overwhelming response from the participants.

COVID-19 is a health crisis that risks evolving into a broad child-rights crisis.

The socio-economic impact of the virus is potentially catastrophic for many children.

Millions of children will likely drop out of school altogether.

For children facing extreme deprivations, acute stress can trigger longer-term mental health challenges.

Lockdowns come with heightened risk of children witnessing or suffering violence and abuse.
